Developing formative writing in Primary History

Workshop 6 - Wednesday 15th April, 2026

Formative writing can provide valuable insight into pupils' historical thinking. This practical webinar explores how giving pupils regular opportunities to write during history lessons can help capture their understanding at different points in the learning process. It will show how formative writing supports pupils in organising and developing their ideas, while enabling teachers to identify and address misconceptions early and effectively.

Developing extended writing in Primary History

Workshop 7 - Wednesday 6th May, 2026

Extended writing helps pupils bring together their historical knowledge and thinking. This practical webinar explores effective ways to support and challenge pupils to write at length in primary history. It will look at how carefully structured writing frames can support the development of key disciplinary concepts, while gradually enabling pupils to reach and express independent, well-reasoned conclusions of their own.

Invisible assessment in Primary History

Workshop 8 - Thursday 11th June, 2026

Effective assessment in history does not need to be time-consuming or burdensome. This practical webinar explores how pupils' understanding of key substantive concepts in primary history can be assessed formatively through everyday classroom practice. It will show how teachers can support good progress and gain meaningful insight into pupils' learning without relying on complex or heavy assessment systems.
